Central Wisconsin Cultural Center

Steve Kipfer is the board chair and Stephany Hartman is the executive director of the Central Wisconsin Cultural Center which will be changing its name to Jackson Street Arts with the future move to their new location at 411 Jackson Street.

The Cultural Center is in its twenty-second year formed in 1996 with an original location in the former DeByles store. They are now in the first floor of the old Johnson Hills building across from the Job Center. Through a generous gift from Joy Berg they own the former Ebsen's greenhouse property which is 1.4 acres across from the Mead on Jackson Street corresponding with their name change to be more indicative of their location.

Their mission is; "Central Wisconsin Cultural Center advocates for the arts by recognizing and fostering creative experiences through classes, exhibits, and social gatherings as a vital element of individual and community wellbeing."

They host numerous programs (see below). With the new facility they will have an art gallery with 175-person capacity, a community room for up to 30, an art garden/outdoor venue, as well as classroom and studio rooms. They are looking to raise an additional $1.4 million for the project and the capital campaign called "Grow the Arts" <http://www.culturalcenterarts.com/donate.html>
