Kristopher Gasch – New Wide Format Press

Fey will be celebrating their 90th anniversary Next year.

Manuel (Manny) R. Fey purchased W. F. Huffman Printing Company in 1932 for $17,000 and renamed the company "The Fey Publishing Company" and refocuses efforts from magazine publishing to commercial printing. In 1943 Fey Publishing installs first offset Press, the only one between Minneapolis and Chicago.

They entered the digital age with their first digital press capable of variable data printing (think of your name on a catalog jersey or invitation) with the purchase and installation of an HP Indigo press in 2010.

Their latest addition is a 64" wide capable printer which uses a heat-set latex ink which will last 3-5 years in the elements. Typical applications are for large format prints such as banners on buildings or inside grocery stores. It can also produce car/truck wraps (but do not install them). The unit can also print on a variety of substrates including cloth, vinyl (most popular), paper, plastic, etc.

The primary source of substrate is Nekoosa Coated Products which just merged with Appvion. The press operator produced Rotary stickers for the group.
